CONTINUOUS LEARNING GROUP, INC. APPOINTS CHARLES CARNES AS PARTNER WITHIN THE FIRM

PITTSBURGH, October 2, 2008 – Charles Carnes, a seasoned consultant who has been with the Continuous Learning Group, Inc. (CLG) for 13 years has been appointed Partner within the consultancy. Charles, an expert at whole systems architecture helps businesses build high-performance work teams by identifying the complex cause-and-effect relationships responsible for positive and negative outcomes. He brings a diverse skill set to each consulting engagement, including experience in 360° feedback initiatives, organizational culture assessments, instructional design, and training delivery.

“Throughout his 13-year tenure at CLG, his stellar achievements as the client manager for some of our firm’s most high profile clients are only the tip of the iceberg of a long list of accomplishments. I believe he has always played a pivotal role in fostering strong relationships with our clients, in building a dynamic and successful project team, and in having a measurable impact on project results,” said Steve Jacobs, CEO and Senior Partner, CLG.

“I am honored by this opportunity and look forward to further applying my experience for the benefit of our clients,” said Charles Carnes. “CLG is known as a leading consulting firm in the area of applied behavioral science, I am only too happy to continue my work with the well-respected, highly regarded company.”

Charles earned a B.S. degree in Biology from Wofford College and an M.A. in Industrial and Organizational Psychology at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Prior to joining CLG, Charles was a Principal with Decision Metrics, Inc. In his early career he served as an Internal Consultant with Mecklenburg County Government where he achieved whole-systems redesign in concert with the County leadership. Charles’ background and consulting engagements have spanned diverse industries including manufacturing, business, government; and financial services. In most of these industries he led large-scale organizational development initiatives and systems redesign projects.
