Ned Morse Leaves CLG

PITTSBURGH, PA — October 22, 2009 — The Continuous Learning Group, Inc. (CLG) announced today that Edward “Ned” Morse left CLG to embark on new career endeavors aligned with his personal goals. Mr. Morse has been a senior executive at CLG since the 1998 merger of his Atlanta-based firm, OPG, with CLG – one of the earliest consulting firms specializing in applying the science of behavior to business strategy and execution. During his eleven years as a senior CLG leader, he contributed widely to the firm’s growth and expansion of client services. In 2005 Mr. Morse assumed the role of interim CEO and subsequently held that position through 2007. He served as a member of CLG’s Board of Directors during his time with the company.

The Continuous Learning Group, Inc. (CLG) is a leader in behavior-based strategy execution and performance improvement consulting. CLG helps Fortune 500 Companies to better understand how to execute their business strategies and processes with a higher level of employee engagement and greater performance by helping them to pinpoint and effectively manage the critical few high impact behaviors that have the greatest effect on their business success. CLG’s unique application of the principles of Applied Behavioral Science enables the companies they work with to achieve lasting results consistently, with speed, precision, and control.
